TEN BOOKS To Learn About Counting

“Over in the Ocean:
In a Coral Reef”
By Marianne Berkes
J-ER BER

Count to ten while learning about ocean creatures and their habitats. With gorgeous clay illustrations, the tune of the song is in the back, so sing along!

“The Very Hungry Caterpillar”
By Eric Carle
J-ER CAR/J-ER BOARD CAR

This classic book by lauded author/illustrator Eric Carle teaches about counting by way of a caterpillar’s transformation into a butterfly.

“Fish Eyes: A Book You Can Count On”
By Lois Ehlert
J-ER EHL

If you’ve ever wondered what it was like to be a fish, you’re not alone. Lois Ehlert journeys into the deep and counts to ten in the process.

“Count!”
By Denise Fleming
J-ER FLE

One through ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty. So many animals to count! With Fleming’s stylized illustrations make your way through a zoo of numbers.

“365 Penguins”
By Jean-Luc Fromental
J-ER FRO

Not your typical counting book. Every day for a whole year another penguin is mailed to an unsuspecting family. How will they cope?

“How Many Snails?”
By Paul Giganti Jr.
J-ER GIG

While this story does not focus on particular numbers, it requires the child to physically count the objects on the page. This could potentially require some adult assistance for the younger counter.

“Count on the Subway”
By Paul DuBois Jacobs & Emily Swender
J-ER JAC

Count up to ten and back down to one in this graphically interesting book illustrated by the acclaimed Dan Yaccarino.

“Chicka Chicka 1 2 3”
By Bill Martin Jr.
J-ER MAR

Count the numbers as they climb to the top of an apple tree. When the bumblebees are angered that their tree is being taken over, the numbers are going to have to make a run for it.

“How Much Is a Million?”
By David M. Schwartz
J-ER SCH

Not a one through ten book, but expands on the concept of big numbers. Helps a more advanced counter envision what huge numbers look like.

“How Do Dinosaurs Count to Ten?”
By Jane Yolen & Mark Teague
J-ER BOARD YOL

This book reinforces counting from one to ten with Yolen’s famous dinosaurs. Children will enjoy seeing their favorite dinosaurs and want to count along.
